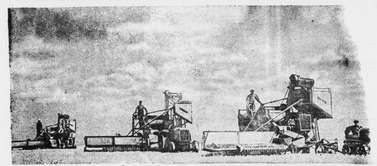
CANADA'S "WAR HARVEST"



THIS year's Canadian grain harvest was the largest in the country's entire agricultural history. Six hundred and fifteen million bushels of wheat were reaped from the great western plains and the farms of eastern Canada.

The record-breaking harvest caught Canada at a time when heavy demands of the fighting forces and war industry had created an acute shortage of manpower on the farms.

The patriotic spirit and ingenuity of the farmers came to the rescue, however, and the harvest was quite successful. People left the towns and went to the country to help with the harvest on week-ends and holidays. Farmers shared their equipment and planned their work in an orderly and co-operative way. Old-timers and youngsters toiled side by side. The sight of a twelve-year-old driving a tractor was not an unusual one. Women worked beside the men.

As a result of this combined effort, the storage bins of the nation are now filled to overflowing and the surplus grain has been stored in temporary buildings. This was not the first time that the wheat fields of the country had increased production to fulfill the needs of war. During the last war Canada also experienced a record harvest. Just as the methods of warfare have changed between this conflict and the last, so have the methods of harvesting. In the upper photo the modern "mechanized forces" are shown at work on the prairies.

As fast as the heavily burdened shipping of the United Nations can handle it, Canada is pouring the food from her granaries into the storage bins of her allies. The finished product, in the form of flour, is also going abroad. Scenes such as the one shown in the lower photo are being duplicated at Canadian ports on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

ETHELBERT MARSHALL
STRATTON— 1863-1942
JAMES DILLARD MORRIS
1866-1942

E. M. Stratton was born during the dark days of the War Between the States and came up during the harrowing days of reconstruction, when hard work and economy was a real necessity. But he was a young man possessed of the stuff to meet the demands of the occasion, and was one of the best farmers and one of the most useful men of his section. In his passing the county lost one of its best citizens, and Hebron Baptist Church one of its most useful members.

J. D. Morris also came up in the days of necessary hard work and economy; he too mastered the situation and after spending his young days on the farm, came to Appomattox and became one of the leading merchants. In his passing the county has lost one of its leading citizens, and the church a useful member.

THREE CHEERS FOR YOU
from our men in uniform!

And thanks to you from Greyhound
--for helping get them home for the Holidays!

Thanks to you, a most critical period in wartime bus transportation has been passed with flying colors!

Just before Christmas Greyhound asked you to "Give Your Christmas trips to men in the service"—and you did! Because you did, extra buses, extra trips, thousands of men and women in the armed forces were able to go home by bus for their furloughs and holidays. They thank you for precious hours spent with loved ones—Greyhound thanks you for cooperating so willingly and voluntarily.

In helping service men make Holiday trips home, you also made travel smoother and more convenient for war workers and others whose trips could not wait.

It is cooperation like this that makes it possible for Greyhound and other bus lines to carry on the tremendous mass-transportation job that is so essential to winning the war.

To aid in this wartime task, Greyhound for many months has asked travelers, whenever possible, to plan their trips for periods when buses are less crowded. By accepting this and other practical suggestions, you have helped to keep America's transportation strong and active in our nation's defense.

When transportation emergencies arise in the future, Greyhound will keep you informed of ways in which you may help. In the meantime it is wise to plan your trips for the uncrowded mid-week days, and to ask your Greyhound agent for information, well in advance.
